 Considering a change of hair colour? Make-up artist Lauren Hersheson (hairstylist Daniel's daughter) offers a make-up consultation and lesson during your three-hour colourist appointment.

OBSESSION OF THE SEASON
Raw beauty

Hot from the US is a new trend for using products 'raw' – as in blended to order and taken home fresh. The advantage? Converts say you'll enjoy the same purifying, glow-giving benefits that a raw food diet offers. In skincare, the Bee Yummy cream (a healing balm for everything from sunburn to eczema), £20, from NY's cult Live Live Food store is hand-blended for you. At the London fragrance bar of hip NY brand Le Labo, the raw ingredients of your scent are mixed for you fresh, and even the label is printed while you wait. And at London's Glow Urban Spa, 'superfood' ingredients like acerola berries are hand-blended just before your facial.

COLOURS OF THE SEASON
The new neutrals

There's a new trend for going back to basics: updating staple neutrals so you're using the lightest textures and most flattering colours. Next week, Bobbi Brown launches a 'nude' collection, which was inspired, she says, by 'colours I see naturally in women's faces'. The Nude Lip & Eye Palette, £40, is expected to sell out fast. Similarly, Giorgio Armani has a new foundation designed to feel like a second skin. Face Fabric, £27, uses a 3D elastic technology to adhere to every contour, plus a 'velvet texturizer' to make your complexion soft and beautiful. And finally, L'Oréal Paris has Made For Me Naturals, from £6.99 – neutral eye palettes you choose according to your hair and skin colour.

UNLIKELIEST BEAUTY LAUNCH OF THE SEASON
Ojon Tawaka ball

It looks, feels and even smells like a chocolate Easter egg, but Ojon Tawaka, £35, is actually a solid, tennis ball-shaped skincare product that cleanses and exfoliates your body using a plethora of rainforest ingredients, including ojon nut shells, antioxidant rich savage cacao paste (hence the chocolatey smell), plus other skin-softening oils and butters. Fact: it contains the same antioxidant content as 2,834lbs of blueberries. You moisten it thoroughly, then buff your skin in a circular motion and let the ball do the rest! ■
